A FEW WORDS FROM YOUR SOCIETY PRESIDENT

In last month's newsletter, I wrote about adopting new technology. One new resource our Society can no longer ignore is building a presence on social media, namely Facebook.com. Our membership committee chair, Jan Penland, pointed out the untapped value of social media during our last Board meeting. Our focus as genealogists is the past, however if we only insist on doing business using the communication tools of the past, our Society may slowly become part of history. Our continued existence and growth depends upon seeking out and adopting new methods. Following Board discussion, and given genealogy societies without a Facebook account are one of a rapidly shrinking number, it was the consensus of the Board that it is time to act and open a presence on Facebook.com.

Facebook.com, originally started in 2004 as a service for college students. It is now mainstream with more than 1.5 billion users around the world. Over that timeframe, Facebook.com has become a way to stay in touch with colleagues, friends and family across time zones and continents. In times past, people lost touch with folks when they left home for college or relocated for job and career. This was not intentional. They just couldn't stay in touch by postal mail or email. Today, using Facebook.com, people are more likely to keep in touch despite the challenges of major life changes such as career and family moves.

For entities, such as our Genealogy Society, a Facebook account means that one member represents many more. When you post topical information, you may find the posts shared by members as fast as they can type on their devices. For a genealogy society, a post about local family history may not be of interest outside the local area. However, Facebook pages are searched by a variety of people. Someone who once was local may reconnect based on a search result. Also, a descendant of an Ancestor local to this area, but living in another state, may decide to become a long-distance member upon finding our page. Thus Facebook.com can indirectly help our Genealogy Society build a larger following and enhance membership possibilities.

Due to the expansion of social media, many citizens learn about causes and non-profit goals through sites such as Facebook.com. Creating a Facebook.com page is straight forward for a non-profit entity and it is up to us to get the most out of this free platform. Your society's Facebook page will be a place where we can share, text, images or videos, whether it's news about our Society purpose or details about a program event. We will soon build a Facebook page, and in the interim your board is open to advice from any and all, so please use this email address <contactus@arlingtongenealogytx.org> to send us your suggestions.

The next AGS Board Meeting is scheduled for Saturday morning, March 18th, in the Northeast Branch Library community room. Society members are always invited to participate by sharing their ideas with a board member or by attendance.

Following the January meeting, our membership count was in the vicinity of sixty members.

See you Tuesday evening at the February 14th member's meeting.

Peter G. Jacobs, President of the AGS

BOOK PURCHASING

If you are not aware of the research that Mary Ann Conrad does for books for our Genealogy Section of the Library, the following is an example.

Among the places she searches is notices from publishers of books on sale or republished, searching counties that members are researching in, as well as Librarians in various libraries who are offering books for sale or just the price of postage. Our Library has so many books on the shelf that have been purchased in the past. Every time I find a book sale from Genealogical Publishing, for example, more than likely we already have it.

Recently, Mary Ann purchased two books on Knox County, Ohio for postage. They are Death Records of Knox County, Ohio Bks 1 - 3, 1867 - 1908, 219 pgs. with index and History of Knox County, Ohio, by N. N. Hill, Jr., 1881, 854 pgs, no index, hardcover w/1881 date. The cost to AGS was $3.44.

The book on Death Records was in good condition but was spiral bound. This book will be sent to the bindery and then placed on the shelf. The History of Knox County was not in "Library condition."

When she emailed the results of the purchase, I wondered if the book might be available online. I located the book at <https://archive.org/details/historyofknoxco00hill> You can download the book as a PDF and read it at your leisure.

Another note about books online: Google the name of the book. Sometimes it is available online or you can locate the nearest library that has a copy.

When Mary Ann is researching books for our collection, she does in-depth research on the book, such as type of binding, checking prices on the internet, shipping costs, etc. Her focus is to get the best books at the lowest price. There is no way to teach her method of purchasing books.

As an aid to Mary Ann, if you find a book in your researching that might be a good "fit" for our Library, contact her about it. This is also why she desires to know the counties you are researching, time frames, and records you are searching. Keep up the fantastic work, Mary Ann!

GETTING INSPIRATION FOR GENEALOGY

Inspiration for genealogy is all around us. I don't mean the inspiration that gets us started. I mean inspiration for our actual research.

None of us can know about every facet of every possible way to research someone. Although we as good researchers are always looking for more records, we are wise to keep in mind the adage: "You don't know what you don't know." The trick is to recognize opportunities to fill in that knowledge.

If you're a member of a genealogy society, do you look at the index to the journal and get disappointed if your ancestor isn't listed? (It's ok. I do, too.) But even when our ancestors aren't included by name, it doesn't mean that journal has nothing to offer.

Read those case studies and articles not with an eye for your ancestor's name, but with an eye for finding new-to-you resources and methods. Recognize when a record that they use in a case study could be applicable in your research.

The same is true for any of the genealogy shows on tv. After getting over the envy you felt when Vanessa Williams found a photo of her ancestor in his Civil War pension (she was sooooo lucky!), think about the other records they used. Could any records of those types help you in your research?

Inspiration is all around us. We just need to be open to it.

Washington. – The ranks of old American warriors are growing thinner year by year, the annual report of Pensions Commissioner Earl D. Church reveals. None remain of those who battled with Mexico in the '40s and only a few tottering veterans remain to tell of Western combats with Indians.

The fighters who defended the "freedom of the seas" against Great Britain in 1812 are gone, the report reveals, tho eleven of their widows have outlived them.

There were only 477,915 pensioners at the end of the last fiscal year, Church reported, as compared with 491,194 a year ago. More money is paid to Civil War widows than to any other class. Of the $229,889,954 disbursed in pensions last year, they received $86,474,399.

There are 59,945 Civil War veterans remaining of that band which served under Grant, and 181,235 of their widows survive, the pension rolls show. All but 5574 of the veterans of the Indian wars are dead, and their widows number only 4000.
