Fort Worth's National Archives Regional Library to Move

The public research room of the National Archives and Records Administration in Fort Worth is planning to move from a low-profile, 1940s-era building on the city's south side to a high-profile, 1920s-era building on the west side. The research room will relocate to 4,600 square feet on the ground level of Montgomery Plaza, 2600 W. Seventh St., a rather large shopping center.

People visiting the old location often complained that it is hard to find and getting past the guard gate can be intimidating. Preston Huff, the archives' regional administrator in Fort Worth, said the new location will be much easier for visitors to reach. Newsletter reader Betty Clay points out that the new location is in the old Montgomery Ward mail order building on a very busy street near downtown, and only a few blocks from the 'cultural center' of theaters, museums, football stadium, parks, etc. The new location will be easy to access. Clay quipped, "It will be quite a change."

The research room will have 10 computers linked to online databases, as well as a few microfilm readers. It will also have a learning center for teachers who want to know how the archives can help them in the classroom.

Monthly General Meeting August 28, 2010

Subject:

Historic Texas Cemetery Designations and the Texas Historical Marker Application Process

Presenters:

Susan Taylor and Jo Pirtle from the Tarrant County Historical Commission

The two speakers discussed in detail how to go about getting a Texas Historical Marker and some of the historical cemeteries in Tarrant County.

The Texas Historical Commission regulates and authorizes historical markers. Essentially, you obtain the proper forms from the Commission. Submit the completed form to the county historical commission (there is one for each county) together with a $100 non refundable fee during the application window. Then, if permission is granted, the applicant buys the desired marker, and the local authorities install the marker.

Full details can be obtained from:

During the second subject, historical cemeteries in Tarrant County, we discussed where some long lost cemeteries might be as well as where some very obscure sites can be found.

Another Source of Information on Early East Texas Marriages

I have been searching for A. Smith Kilgore for quite some time. He was my great great grandfather, and he married Mary J. Daniels of Upshur County, Texas, sometime before 1856. Alas, most of the marriage records from that time frame were lost during a courthouse fire.

Another researcher recently informed me of this book:

Marriage and Death Notices
The Texas Republican
Marshall, Texas
1849-1869

On page 30 of this book contains this notice:

Dec 8, 1855 Married on Tuesday the 4th inst. at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Gilbert Buie, by John Turner, Esq. Mr. A.S. Killgore, late of Mississippi to Mrs. Mary J. Daniels, of Upshur Co., Texas.

The notice is interesting as the known issue of the marriage was my great grandmother, Mary Alicia Kilgore who was born in September of 1856.

The Library of Congress and the Harrison County Research Library have a copy of the book. Since Marshall, Texas, is the county seat of Harrison County, it is far more convenient for our members to travel to Marshall for further research.
